

Vancouver Urban Farming Society Volunteer Fundraiser Call for Applicants

About the Vancouver Urban Farming Society

The Vancouver Urban Farming Society (VUFS) works to strengthen urban farming, the commercial production of food in the city, through education, networking, advocacy and business support towards our mission of growing urban farming in Vancouver and beyond. We are a three year old non-profit society that was largely founded and continues to be governed by young urban farmers. Vancouver's urban farmer movement is dynamic and exciting as various urban farming organizations develop different approaches to growing food in the city. Learn more about the different urban farm organizations and VUFS at www.urbanfarmers.ca.

About the Position

VUFS is looking for a volunteer fundraiser to work with our board of directors and manager to create and implement a fundraising strategy. VUFS is open to different mechanisms for raising funds and will participate on a fundraising committee to support the work of this position and offer direction as well as targets. It is expected that the fundraiser will work both independently as well as in close collaboration with the fundraising committee at key junctures. The timeline for the position is flexible.

How to Apply

Send an e-mail indicating your interest with a brief summary of your experience and resume to Zsuzsi Fodor, VUFS Manager, at zsuzsi@urbanfarmers.ca. Applications will be accepted on a rolling basis until the position is filled.
